

San Luis Obispo Railroad Museum People Tracker

Compiled here are about 2,500 names and, when known, certain other information on people who worked in some capacity for a railroad that operated on California's Central Coast, according to sources deemed to be generally reliable. Especially in the case of the Southern Pacific (1880s to 1996), the workers may have been based outside the Central Coast and rarely or never actually worked here, but are listed because the geographic section of the railroad they worked for included this region. There is a high probability that such workers were involved in the segments between San Francisco and San Jose, Monterey, or Watsonville/Salinas.

Because the sources range from formal and informal hand-written items to commercially produced, typeset documents, spelling of names in particular may include errors. It was standard railroad practice throughout the country to identify railroad employees only by first initial, second initial (if any), and last name, which is reflected in most information from railroad sources.

It was also standard practice that employees would be called to work, and could bid on specific jobs, in order of seniority –the date the person was first officially recognized as qualified for a certain job category. Train crews rarely worked the same time every day or the same days every week, or with the same people. Due largely to railroads absorbing smaller ones, and to administrative regions being changed, seniority often held only within what today would be considered a small area. Relocating from the San Joaquin Valley to the Coast, for example, could result in moving to the bottom of the seniority list.

Some entries reflect different sources for the same name, which may reflect different jobs and different locations at different times.

A typical career path would be brakeman to conductor, or fireman to engineer, with conductor to engineer being more common as fireman positions were eliminated in the 1960s as diesel locomotives completely replaced steam. Clerk to telegrapher to operator to dispatcher, and laborer to foreman, were common paths for those not part of train crews. Knowing the name and latest seniority date, with the source document, may lead to other milestones in the worker's time with the railroad.

Railroad names are indicated by the following:

AM – Amtrak

O – Other, reflected in Job column; notes in right column for other railroad names (usually predecessors of the Pacific Coast Railway)

PC – Pacific Coast

SL – San Luis Obispo Street Railway

SM – Santa Maria Valley

SP – Southern Pacific

ST – Stone Canyon (also known as Coalfields)

UP – Union Pacific

- (1) Name Metz was a place shown in SP timetables (in Timetable No. 144 of March 21, 1937, it's 152.3 miles from San Francisco) and is associated with a hill along the line.
- (2) Name Thyle was shown in later SP timetables for a spur on Cuesta Grade east of the summit tunnel, a staging area for construction.
- (3) Ray Craig, retired, participated in the Museum's Train Tales oral history in 2015, with retired signal supervisor Sid Marques.
- (4) Welby information is suspect because it was out of date sequence in original document and had been lined through with pencil.
- (5) Spelled Delarosa and given seniority dates of 1945 (fireman) and 1955 (engineer) in SPTCo Western Div. - Coast District Seniority Roster/2430.1.
- (6) Listed as Dekoker J J, with seniority dates of 19461112 (fireman) and 19550511 (engineer) in SPTCo Western Div. - Coast District Seniority Roster/2430.1
- (7) Same name with seniority dates of 19500824 (fireman) and 19600217 (engineer) in SPTCo Western Div. - Coast District Seniority Roster/2430.1
- (8) Art Laidlaw was based in San Luis Obispo for many years, provided several photographs for various publications, and donated several items to the Museum.
- (9) Juan V. Avila, and others so noted, were directors of the San Luis Obispo and Santa Maria Railroad, which in effect became the Pacific Coast Railway.
- (10) William L. Beebe, William W. Chapman, and Charles W. Dana were actually directors of the San Luis Obispo Railroad, which in effect became the Pacific Coast Railway.
